Tips for effective presentations

- Titles should be 35– 45 points – make sure each slide has one. Short, concise titles are best.
- Use 24 point fonts or larger for body copy.
- Contrast title and body text by colour and font size.
- Do not over use bold, italic and all capital letters, italics can be hard to read.
- Make sure charts stand on their own and can be understood.
- As a guide: 6 words per bullet, 6 bullets /lines per slide.
- If you have more than four rows or four columns in a table, it will be difficult to read.
- Keep the colour scheme the same throughout the presentation.
- Include graphics to give readers a break from all the text.
- Keep fonts, bullets, colour, and graphics consistent in the presentation.
- As a guide, approximately 1 slide per minute of presentation should be the aim.
